PREAMBLE

Competitive Nordic walking is a sport specialty that is manifested through competitions in which the participants use poles specially designed for the development of this activity, with the aim of optimizing the physical effort made in the movement, making the itinerary on foot, in the shortest possible time, applying the appropriate technique (you cannot run, you must keep at least one foot and one pole in contact with the ground at all times using the poles actively, without dragging them, performing the diagonal technique that consists of the support at all times of each baton in action with the opposite foot), and with the maximum respect for the natural environment

Nordic Walking is a walking discipline among the disciplines recognized by the European Masters Athletics (EMA) and can be with mass-start, individual time trials and a relay, on circuits with homogeneous terrain that may foresee slight altimetric variations (no more than 6%).

- d) During the initial support phase of the pole on the ground and at the end of the push, the athlete's legs and arms can be slightly bent (in a natural way), as required by the Nordic Walking technique.
- e) It is not allowed to change the length of the sticks during the competition.
